On behalf of our colleagues, Rugby Europe, Sportlomo created both mens and womens competitions in our system using our bespoke tournament module. Across 68 games of the competition, unions submitted and printed team sheets, results were recorded and playing statistics were inputted.

Our tournament module allows an easy transition from the group phase of competition to the knockout phase with each result determining a clear path to the final rounds. The system records the finishing position of each team from 1-12.

Eoin Carney, SportLoMo's Project Manager for European Rugby, supported Rugby Europe in Krakow at the Games.

Although Ireland and GB emerged victorious, there were standout performances across the tournament from Kestutis Karabauskas of Lithuania, Gaspard Lalli of Belgium and Pol Pla of Spain who were the top try scorers in the men's competition. Poland's Malgorzata Koldej delighted the home crowd for the entire weekend and emerged as the top try scorer in the women's competition.

All 406 tries scored over the weekend, along with conversions and yellow and red cards were recorded on Sportlomo's competition stats module.

As winners of the men's and women's tournaments, Ireland and Great Britain gain entry to the Paris Olympic Games 2024.
